“The Surround Method, the corporate audience are sat within the orchestra in a checkerboard fashion. The sensation of being seated within the music is so completely different from the conventional stage-audience setting. In this set up a unique model is created. Using the Symphony Orchestra as his metaphor Miha opens up a dialogue on issues of synchronous teamwork and communication and effectively demonstrates the differences between rational corporate ways of thinking and approaching problems as opposed to the creative way of thinking which artists and musicians apply. Through 'active listening' Miha stimulates creative and lateral thinking within the audience. Corporate audiences have stated their quality of thinking becomes clear, strong and insightful.”
